Daughters of Jacob Vent and Dialysis

Life on dialysis is never easy. Compound the situation with breathing disabilities that require ventilator services and life becomes infinitely more complicated. For patients who need both, fortunately there is a skilled nursing facility that can accommodate them...DoJ, a 405-bed skilled nursing facility in the Bronx, NY.

"Having both services under one roof at DoJ is a tremendous convenience. The time saved traveling from the nursing home to an outside clinic alone is a blessing for our residents," says dialysis Nurse Manger, Josep Adalla. Plus, the stress and strain associated with constant moving can be a real hardship. Ventilator patients are monitored by a respiratory therapist during treatment so that the patients are comfortable, while allowing family to be assured that quality care and individualized attention is being provided to their loved one. Now consider the patient that requires vent and dialysis—AND bariatric care. DoJ is one of the few facilities on the East Coast that can accommodate these patients.

Beyond convenience, there are medical advantages to providing all three services in the same facility. Respiratory and dialysis staff familiar with the special needs of bariatric patients work together to make sure treatments are scheduled properly, that prescriptions are coordinated and that the patient is monitored for any changes in condition.

And when they're not receiving treatment, residents can also take advantage of all the other services offered at DoJ, like: recreational activities, pet therapy, entertainment and religious services to name a few. DoJ's therapeutic recreations programming offers these patients a distraction from their complex medical issues and hope for a simpler, more fulfilling lifestyle.
