May 16, 2005 (White Plains, NY) – Schnurmacher Center for Rehabilitation & Nursing, located in White Plains, NY, recently celebrated the second anniversary of its "Culture Change Journey" with a cocktail party and reception featuring photographs by noted local artist John E. Hamburger.

"Culture Change Journey" is a new concept in patient centered care adapted by Schnurmacher, where each floor is a self-contained community dedicated to its residents where values of integration, creativity, compassion, and caring are incorporated into their daily routine.

According to the staff, the biggest change they noticed since the "culture change" happened is the empowerment they feel as a group. The neighborhood concept has brought medical and CNA staff, support staff, and residents together to work towards the common goal of making each floor into a "community."
